

Pedagogy Project

Supporting Transformational Learning

Dear Colleagues,

I would like to invite you to the third spring workshop supporting the Pedagogy Project. Our hope is that the workshops will complement our fall forums and widen your repertoire of teaching strategies appropriate to your discipline and teaching style. These workshops are hosted by the office of the Provost and Executive Vice President.

Developing an Online Course
Tuesday, March 21, 11:00-1:00
Rudder 501

Presented by: Wendy Clayton, Instructional Technology Services
Jernaley Martin, Instructional Technology Services

Transitioning from a face-to-face to an online course can be challenging. For some who are not familiar with technology, it can even be a little scary. Yet whether teaching online is a delivery method you have volunteered to do or has been asked of you to do, there are barriers to overcome and greater rewards for tackling those obstacles. This session is ideal for any educator responsible for designing and/or teaching an online course. Even if you are not teaching online and want to know what goes into the transition, join us as we provide starting tips to think about when designing or improving an online course. Who knows? Maybe you will have some ideas to share with the group—and many more ideas to walk away with.

Lunch will be provided. To assist with catering, we ask that you please RSVP at <https://ers.tamu.edu/register.aspx?scheduleid=7202>.

Additional workshops addressing other engaging and motivating pedagogical strategies are scheduled through the spring semester. Invitations to these workshops will be distributed shortly.

I hope you are able to join us. If not feel free to send comments or questions directly to me at a-kenimer@tamu.edu.

Best regards,

Ann
